The new members will be sworn in.

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 3.—A calm, determined young man sat in the county jail here today and offered his body for sale.

And his price is money enough to get his war-time "buddy" out of jail.

George Vexanet, facing trial for the murder of his fiancée, Miss Louise Floquet, is the "dealer in death." He killed the girl as he held her in his arms on the front porch of her home.

"I begged her to come back to me—and she laughed. Then I killed her," is his only explanation of the crime.

Vexanet wants to die for the crime. He wants to dispense with the formality of a trial and die in the electric chair. When life has been shocked from his body, he wants to sell it to the highest bidder—doctors, hospitals, anyone who will pay the price.

"How much do you think my body should be worth?" he asks. "Enough to get my buddy, Robert Shawes, held on a misdemeanor charge out of jail? I am tired of life. I am better off dead than alive to him. I want to die. And so, why not?"

Last week, Vexanet gave all the money he had—$97.50—to a friend to get Shawes out on bail. But the friend was held up and the money stolen.

Vexanet, a former French airman, was wounded seven times during the war. His parents, wealthy people of Vichy, France, known nothing of his plight. If he dies he wants his mother to be told he died in a plane crash.

His trial is scheduled to be started today—but it means nothing to him. His "buddy" is in trouble. Vexanet, his only friend, is facing what he believes to be certain death.

He asks: "How much will you offer? I must get my 'buddy' out of jail!"

Thad McLain Wildcat Is Bailing

The Thad McLain in its No. 1 Green well, 4 miles east of Teague Sunday was bailing at about 2500 feet with about 1000 feet more to bail. The casing is holding up very satisfactory and the bailer shows encouraging when the bailer is brought to the surface. The next few days should be "critical." Officials of the Thad McLain company feel very encouraged by the showings thus far encountered and it is hoped that as the bailer goes to the bottom that the well will do as it has shown it might be capable of doing.

As a result of the encouraging showings encountered in this well it is known that leasing activity is increasing as several blocks of acreage are being made-up with other blocks being under the preliminary stage and it is hoped within a short time to announce several locations to be made on these blocks.

Conversion Of Funds Charged Against Banker

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 3.—The trial of H. E. Byrne, president of the defunct Security State Bank which closed its doors more than a year ago, opened with a motion by defense to quash the indictment on the ground that Byrne is only civilly liable, if at all, for the bank's failure. The indictment charges Byrne with alleged conversion of funds and the acceptance of deposits when he knew the bank was insolvent. The guaranty fund is said to have been taxed more than $600,000 to pay off depositors.

Posses And Dogs Trail 13 Escaped Prisoners

LANSING, Kans., Dec. 5.—(United Press).—Posses led by blood hounds today attempted to follow trails of thirteen prisoners who escaped from Kansas penitentiary by burrowing through an abandoned tunnel.

ended at the river bank and officials believed a fast motor boat may have been waiting for the fugitives at that point.

Throughout the night 100 guards directed the operations of citizens posses which tracked the fugitives along the river bottom toward railroad tracks. None of the prisoners been sighted since the escape was carried out while the 1,000 prisoners in the institution enjoyed their Sunday liberty.

News of the escape spread rapidly throughout the district and a great cordon of officers, nearly fifty miles in diameter, was drawn up. Peace officers in every village were on guard throughout the night. Every passing train was stopped and carefully looked over. Two freight trains and a passenger had stopped at Lansing from the time the prisoners escaped until it was discovered they were gone.

The delivery was not discovered until more than an hour after the men were outside the prison walls. When the convicts sat down for supper, thirteen vacant places were noticed. An investigation showed that the missing prisoners had cut a hole in the wall of the power house, burrowed through five feet of dirt to the entrance of an abandoned tunnel, 14x16 inches. Through this narrow hole, half filled with mud and slime, the men worked their way to liberty.

A check of the prison records showed Castro was an inmate at the prison at the time the tunnel was filled up and possibly at that time marked for future use. In picking his companions, Castro chose men who had good prison records and were in for only "short stretches." None had more than twenty years to serve, but all had been committed in recent years. Castro "himself" was classed as a "model prisoner." The prisoners braved suffocation and drowning as they dug their way through the narrow tunnel. In several places indications were that it had been completely stopped with the refuse and the men had to claw their way through. Discarded garments four miles from Lansing. The trail was from and was ...

VICTORY IS IN SIGHT

Houston is today gladly proclaiming to the world that her citizens have gone over the top by oversubscribing the $500,000 fund to go into a community chest. The oversubscription amounted to $40,000, giving that city $540,000 for the charity needs of Houston during the next twelve months. The success of the drive indicates that Houston is fundamentally and financially sound, else such a huge sum could not have been raised so easily and so successfully with such little effort.

Mexia citizens today are attempting to raise $5,300 for the same purpose. The committees of big hearted citizens both men and women, went out of Jesse McLendon's office this morning determined to carry the campaign to a successful culmination before the shades of night fall Tuesday. If they can put it over today, so much the better.

This city is thus seeking to raise about one one hundredth as much as Houston has raised already for the Salvation Army and all charity needs. Mexia has 10,000 population and Houston has about 175,000, according to liberal estimates. Should Mexia seek to raise in the same proportion as Houston, this city's quota would be over $80,000.

According to W. B. Landrum, Chairman of the Committees, the campaign so far is bringing to light again the fine spirit of generosity possessed by our people.

The campaign, sure to succeed, again demonstrates that the people of Mexia believe in civic cooperation, which should not be lost in any endeavor. It shows that citizens are very much alike; that men and women respond to the same broad influences, and that service to humanity is a magnet that draws all of us. The call to such a service was heard, clear like, during the war years and then it was, not only in Mexia, but throughout the Union, that such a call proved its efficacy in promoting unity, harmony and brotherly love which lend lustre to life and its varied experiences.

The News again expresses faith in this wonderful citizenship. They will be weighed in the balances during the next few hours but will not be found wanting. Mexia will take care of her own. For Mexia is in America.

Let every citizen prove himself worthy of such a citizenship.

THE EDITORIAL OF THE DAY

OUR TAX PROBLEMS.

Denison Herald

From the first organized human society the tax problem has been a vexatious matter. As civilization became more complex these problems increased in magnitude and intricacy. Taxation among our colonies was troublesome, but not so onerous as it came to be within the next one hundred years. Today, in every city and every state in the Union the raising of money for carrying on government expenses is not only serious but burdensome to the point of sacrifice. In some instances it has almost amounted to confiscation.

But it costs much to pass from the state of anarchy to that of civilization. The Indian had no tax problems to worry over. No revenues were needed. A chief for the tribe could not afford to be without his tribal warriors. He required and exacted the duty of hunting, skill with bow and arrow, endurance and courage of the men, and domestic slavery of his women. The gathered tribe contributed all that was necessary to maintain a loose tribal government. But when even the Indian began to take over the customs and problems of higher civilization he was imposed upon him of certain obligations to the new life of his tribe and which could be met only by the contribution in some form of medium of exchange.

As man advanced into still higher states of civilized society, he has found his obligations increasing. The individual could do no more than his neighbor. But the infinite increase of the public welfare. But the infinite increase of the public welfare. But the infinite increase of the public welfare.

tion which is always too valuable to lose and which must be paid for in order to be maintained.

The government of the state of Texas today costs at least ten times the annual budget of thirty years ago. The same is true of national expenditures. The machinery of civilization is constantly developing new conditions, unique relationships, popular demands and subdivisions of government necessary to prevent injustice and maintain human rights in the midst of ever developing causes of friction and dangers of trespass.

Doubtless there is a constant tendency to wastefulness and extravagance from the public treasury, whether in city, county, state or nation. But the increase of taxes is inevitable with the increased intricacy of governmental machinery. The growth of a nation demands ever-increasing expenditures, just as the growth of the infant calls for increased outlay for maintenance. We shall never see any system that will remove all injustice from taxation. It is humanly impossible to remove utterly every condition that unavoidably imposes heavier burdens on some than on others. A low tax rate is not necessarily a sign of prosperity or of well-being. It may indicate stagnation and lethargy to the new life of his tribe and which could be met only by the contribution in some form of medium of exchange.

WHY INDUSTRY IS MISUNDERSTOOD

Geo. E. Roberts Tells How Co-operative Character of Corporations Is Obscured.

RADICAL AGITATION RESULTS

Maintenance of Present Industrial System Necessary to Maintain Present Standards of Comfort for All the People, He Says.

The modern industrial system is at bottom a co-operative organization, but this fact is obscured by the complexity of huge enterprises, George E. Roberts, noted authority on business and finance, declared in a recent speech before the American Bankers Association Convention at Atlantic City, N. J.

"The primitive man knew that the harder he worked the more he would have," Mr. Roberts said. "When a man exchanged work with a neighbor he had the whole transaction under his eyes. But when a man works with thousands of others for a great corporation he doesn't see any definite relationship between what he does and what he gets. He doesn't know whether he is getting a fair share of the industrial results or not, and he suspects not."

"The modern industrial system is essentially co-operative, but you cannot have effective co-operation without understanding. Because people do not see the industrial organization as a whole we have the tendency for society to break up into groups and blocs and unions and organizations of one kind and another, many of whom are trying to advance their own interests at the expense of society as a whole. The population of this country today could not be supported in the state of comfort to which it is accustomed without the modern, specialized organization."

New Faces Seen In The Senate

By FRASER EDWARDS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(United Press).—For evidences that "the old order changeth," witness the Senate. A generation has wrought a complete principles of Bolshevism are influencing public opinion more or less everywhere.

"The motive behind all this agitation is the desire to establish equality. The social struggles of the past have been for political equality. Now the demand is for equality in possessions, equality in incomes, equality in the management of industrial affairs. There is no argument against the aspirations of men for better social conditions, but radical ideas result from certain economic fallacies. One relates to the employment and service of private capital. Men read about vast sums of wealth belonging to individuals, and think of these sums as devoted exclusively to the owners. In fact wealth employed in production for the public market is rendering service to the entire community, no matter who owns it."

"The whole radical argument is like claiming that nobody ever got any benefit from the development of the steam engine but the owners of steam engines. Of course, the theory only needs to be stated for the fallacy to be apparent. The man who works for wages is benefited by every investment of capital which increases and cheapens the supply of the things for which his wages are spent."

The Service of Capital

"It is a fundamental truth that all productive property, although privately owned, is part of the equipment of society, by which its wants are supplied."

"The progress of the past has been accomplished under the individualistic system. The theory of this system is that every one shall have for his own, as nearly as may be, that which results from his own efforts. It is a system calculated to stimulate the initiative, call out the energies and develop the ability of each individual. He is free as to his undertakings; there are no restrictions except that he must seek his own gains by activities that are serviceable to the community as a whole, and he is inspired to labor not simply by the desire for personal advancement, but by the impulse to provide for loved ones, by the impulse to self-expression, to realize and develop his natural abilities, and by the ambition to achieve, to win distinction and to render service."

"It does not promise equality. Unless there is equality in production, in service, in effort, in resolution and in self-denial, why should there be equality in the division of results?"

"The justification of individualism, however, is not merely in what it allows to the superior individual, but in the results that inure to all. It is in the interest of all to secure the most effective organization, the most effective management and the largest possible production. These cannot be had by adopting the fiction that all have equal ability for any position, or by any other system than that which judges men by their individual qualifications."

change in that august body.

Only three men who have served more than a score of years are due to appear in the new senate picture. The other ninety-three senators would be regarded as newcomers under the old rule when constituencies let senators die in harness.

Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican leader of Massachusetts, is the oldest inhabitant of the Senate in point of service, with 30 years behind him. Senator Warren of Wyoming really

LITTLE FOXES

HOBBIES

Again and again experience shows that hobbies are the things of which success is made. The American business man will cheat himself and limit his growth, if he fails to ride a hobby. A hobby should be ridden. It will bring the individual to some place. Rockefeller once said that the reason he got where he was was because he never remained where he was at. He had a hobby. It carried him to a great goal. In a small country town in the South and there once worked a clerk in a store. He was just an ordinary fellow, his friends said. Yet, he had a husky ambition to get somewhere, to move ahead. The store was small. The town had less than 3,000 population, but these facts did not stifle the fires of ambition that blazed in his earnest soul. So, after all, he was not just an "ordinary fellow". The story goes that the management of the establishment bought a machine to duplicate by means of stencils, typewritten letters and hand lettered sales literature. Tom, which we will say was the clerk's name, was at once impressed with the possibilities of the machine. That machine became his hobby. Long after closing hours he experimented with it. He became so expert that he finally turned out work that excelled any ever put out on such a duplicating machine. Then, he conceived a house organ. The house organ began to increase the business of that store by 30 per cent per year. Sample copies of the work were sent to the manufacturer of the machine. A well known business magazine sent a man down to the little city to see Tom. The result of the interview was a story. Then came an offer from the manufacturer to go to an Ohio city and act as sales manager of one of the largest concerns in the country. Today, Tom is filling that job and is doing it exceptionally well. Some jump from a clerk in a little town much less than the size of Mexia to the sales managership of a nationally known concern! All because he had a hobby and rode it. The future will hold many other thrilling stories of triumph. Will you be one of those to succeed?

Americanism Fostered In Soft Coal Mining Towns By Healthful and Happy Home Conditions

This sturdy and completely equipped football team, posing in approved fashion around the coach, is not the product of any high-priced private school, as might well appear at first sight. On the contrary, they are the pride of the local high school in a town that few Americans probably ever heard of. It is Holden, West Virginia, whose inhabitants total just two thousand, and every one of whom draws his living from the mine that created the community.

Because Holden's sole reason for existence is the fact the adjacent earth holds soft coal, because no one ever thought of settling there until a company was formed to mine it, it was up to the company, in order to attract employees, to provide some place for them to live. But they were not satisfied with just supplying shelter. They went further and furnished schools for the children; hospital facilities for the families and all the other conveniences that make for happy, healthy life. The high school which is a model one, boasts a faculty of ten teachers, including O. P. Westfall, the coach, seen posing here with his team. That the teachers are themselves well-provided for may be seen from the smile on the face of Miss Fay G. Castleman, a college woman who takes care of the children's mathematical studies.

Holden, however, is not the only town built by coal operators for their employees, that can put ordinary rural communities to shame. Miss Bonnie Williams, R.N., the active nurse on the right, is the surgical supervisor and anesthetist at the Guyon Valley Hospital, Logan, West Virginia. Miss Williams, who comes from Wichita, Kans., graduated from the Kessler-Hatfield Hospital of Huntington, W. Va., for no nurse is allowed in these mining communities who does not measure up to the highest standards of the profession. The charge, however, for her services to the patient is exactly $1.00 a month—provided he is a miner.

The fact that neither the Logan nor Holden coal operators are exceptional in this matter of providing for the well-being of its employees, is proved by a survey recently made by six independent women investigators of fourteen coal fields scattered over eleven states. They reported that every community visited had educational facilities for both white and colored children, and in every community also provision had been made for medical care.

got to the Senate first. He did a two-year hitch before his present term began in 1895. Senator Simmons of North Carolina, the Democratic nestor, did not come to the Senate until six years later.

With so many new faces, the Senate will present a vastly different picture. In the place of Knute Nelson, the old Viking, with his snowy chin whiskers, will be another product of Scandinavia—Magnus Johnson, the real dirt farmer who actually milks his own cows.

Two Oldtimers Gone

Two oldtimers who came in together in 1899—Culberson of Texas and McCumber of North Dakota—went out together. The Texan, who had tottered with palsy for ten years, was defeated as a result of the big rate rolled up by an impeached governor of the Lone Star State, and Senator Mayfield, whose seat is under a cloud, won the race. McCumber, whose widely separated syllables style of oratory was long a Senate attraction, was defeated by Senator Frazier, who was recalled as Non-Partisan League governor of his state.

Death has taken Senator Dillingham of Vermont, whose youthful figure belied his 80 years. The nestor of the Senate, Senator Page, also of the Green Mountain State, a few months the senior of Dillingham, has quit. In his place comes former Representative Green, with his blond bangs. Porter Dale has also been elevated from the House in the place of Dillingham.

Hitchcock of Nebraska, an aristocrat in appearance, but a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, has given way to Howell, the progressive Republican. The deliberate but determined Myers of Montana is succeeded by the fiery Wheeler. The lean, bald Poindexter, now ambassador to Peru, has been replaced by the pudgy, blond Dill of Washington, formerly in the House.

Pomeroy of the Websterian dome is gone. In his place Dr. Fess of Ohio will regale the Senate with precise diction. Townsend of Michigan will be missing. Woodbridge Ferris will be there to remind the Senate that it has been a long, long time between Democrats in the Wolverine state.

John Sharp Williams is down in Mississippi with his books and his birds, tending his cotton and mint patches. Herbert Stevens must uphold the honor of Mississippi. Dr. Copeland is there to give the Senate health hints instead of Calder the builder. The athletic France has been replaced by Bruce of Maryland.

Frelinghuysen, the dry, has given way to Edwards, who promised to make New Jersey "as wet as the Atlantic Ocean." Kellogg, in staid knickers, will soon be bowing at the Court of St. James, while Shipstead, the dentist, is representing Minnesota in the Senate.

Ralston of Indiana succeeds Postmaster General New in the Senate, but the Hoosier candidate for President must go to predecessor when he wants to get a postmaster appointed. And Sutherland has in his place Neely, the young West Virginia mountaineer.

Of course it was inevitable that the bertha collar should find its way to the realm of lingerie, because all of the smart, enterprising designers of later years upon boudoir garments. This idea is certainly exceedingly attractive.

The woman who chooses to wear a bertha collar for the making of her lingerie is surely justified when she makes such an attractive nightgown as this one. It calls for three yards of fine material and two and one-half yards of lace. The lace should be twelve inches long. The model may be of silk, or imitation high crepe, or Valenciennes lace. The neck of the gown is in oval outline, and the shoulders are caught together with bands of two-inch satin ribbon.

The neckline should be gathered to fit the bertha so that the lace will not be pulled in in any way. Fasten the bertha over the neckline from back, then sew onto the gown taking a stitch in each mesh of the lace.

Should Satisfy the Fastidious Miss

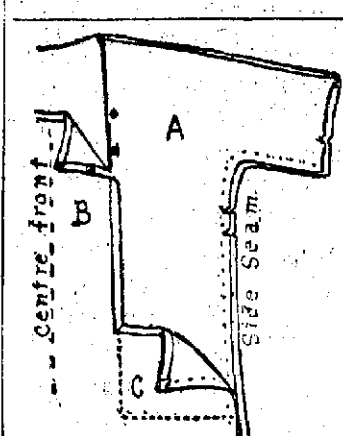

Very Smart in Wool Crepe

This dress looks well in any material, cotton, wool or silk and it is both practical and smart. The trimming is in a dark tone of the same color and, of course, varies according to the material selected for the dress.

Perhaps some doting mother would like to carry out this model in tulle, while another more practical would select gingham for the purpose. But a happy medium between the two would be wool crepe in a becoming shade of Copenhagen blue trimmed with silk braid in very dark blue.

The front panel of the dress is cut six one with the skirt, the sides being stitched down to form pockets. The edges of the panel and the square neckline are stitched with the braid, while ribbon in the same shade of the braid forms the collar and cuffs. Holding in the full at the waist is a string belt, tied at the back. The figure shows one half of the design, with the side-fastening, the kimono sleeve and the pocket given in special detail. The left side of the front should be bound or hemmed and then snap-hooks added for the fastenings. If preferred buttons and buttonholes may be used—it is purely a matter of individual taste. There should be at least two snap-hooks placed about three inches apart to allow an easy opening. Frequently, when the space allowed to slip the head through is small, the dress is easily stretched, if not torn and rendered unfit for service. The sleeves are stitched along with the side seam of the dress before it is bound. The pocket is bound before the side seam is finished, so that the raw edges may be taken into the side seam.

NEW YORK.—Discussion continues over the decision that awarded Frankie Genaro the palm in his Thanksgiving night bout with Carl Tremaine. It was announced that the judges disagreed and the referee cast a deciding ballot in the flyweight champion's favor. Seven sport writers picked Tremaine, four Genaro, while two gave a draw.

PHILADELPHIA.—Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, will meet Midget Smith of New York, in a 10 round bout to a decision here Tuesday night. The fight will not be a championship fight, as Smith will scale about 118. Pennsylvania's new boxing law legalizing decisions went into effect today.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Ted Moore, English middleweight, decisively defeated Johnny Karr, Cleveland, 12 round. Frankie Kearns, Utica middleweight, was awarded the judges verdict over Joe Edwards, Cleveland eight rounds. Battling Barry, Syracuse junior lightweight, and Frankie Anderson, fought six rounds to a draw.

The Chrysanthemum Was Once A Weed!

It required fifty years to develop this plant from the weed to the flower. It would react and become a weed again in five years.

Consistent cultivation—constant attention will transform "loose change" into bank accounts. But the saving must be systematic if the best results are to be attained.

The bank account habit is more than a habit—it is a positive help, especially if the account is with an institution which, like ours, has the interest of its patrons at heart.

HOME DRESSMAKING

By JENNIE WOLAND
(Copyright, 1935 by Pen-Art Service, Inc.)

A Distinctive Note in Blouses

Jewelry Models in Gray Satin Crepe
This French overblouse chooses to be fashioned of atmosphere gray crepe satin, with the cross-stitch trimming done in the bright colors expressive of Chinese embroidery. It requires but little time to make and can be carried out in a wide variety of materials.

Note the simple lines of this separate blouse, although it is classed with the dressy models associated with the three-piece costume so much in demand this season. It is made of simple crepe satin, size 36 or 38 inches bust calling for 2 1/2 yards of material 25 inches wide. A simple cross-stitch border about the lower edge of the blouse and on the sleeves and pocket give it all of the elaboration that the mode requires. The round neck, instead of being finished with a lingerie collar, as so often happens just now, is distinctly bordered, the gathers extending only from shoulder to shoulder at the front. One silk thread the same color as the crepe for gathering. Allow several inches at the end so that the gathers may be let out or drawn in when the blouse is being fitted to the figure. For the gathers, take fine stitches, going over and under each alternate warp and wool thread, depending, of course, upon the direction in which one is working, whether with or against the grain. On very fine or closely woven materials, when working on a straight line, draw one of the threads and then the needle easily weaves over and under the remaining threads.

The cross-stitch is very easy to make also. It consists simply of carrying one slant stitch across the angle of the ether. The beauty of doing cross-stitch embroidery depends upon having all of the upper stitches run in the same direction. A clever mingling of the colors adds greatly to the effectiveness of cross-stitch embroidery. On a background of gray, as in the instance of this blouse, the suggested colors for the embroidery would be light and dark blue, a lighter shade of gray and a touch of coral or canary.

The kimono sleeves are made longer by adding full deep cuffs of the satin. These cuffs are in turn gathered and stitched into a band that is embroidered in cross-stitch. If preferred, the pocket may be omitted, but it is a smart feature of most of the new blouses.

RAIN STOPS WORK ON HOME BUILDING

On account of the inclement weather Contractor Lawrence Ingram who is in charge of the construction of the Hughes demonstration home, has called the work on the home off for the day. As soon as rain subsides, construction will continue. The J. R. Neece Lumber Company will be glad to discuss with anyone interested in the home the details of owning and show the plans for the beautiful place. It is not to be a mansion, just a humble home, the kind Mexia needs more of and the kind that builds towns into cities.

HOUSTON POLICE RECORDS

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 3.—Twenty thousand persons have been arrested up to Nov. 1 of this year, police records show.

This is four thousand over last year for a similar period. Stricter traffic laws and more automobiles caused the increases, Chief Tom Goodson believes.

Big Caucus Of G. O. P. Heads Met Saturday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Progressive and conservative forces came to grips today in the Republican caucus in the House.

Upon the outcome of the battle to be waged behind closed doors, depends:

1. Prompt organization of the House by administration forces, permitting President Coolidge to deliver his message to Congress on Wednesday as scheduled.

2. The fate of administration legislation recommended in the President's message, which must have solid Republican backing to pass.

The conservative slate consists of Representatives Gillett of Massachusetts, for speaker; Longworth of Ohio, majority leader; Frank Scott of Michigan, Republican whip and Sidney Anderson, Minnesota, chairman of the caucus.

Progressive leaders, however, declared the administration will be blocked. They intend to present their demands for committee assignments and liberalization of House rules.

Until these demands are met they say nothing will be done toward House organization.

Claiming from twenty to fifty progressive votes, Representative Nelson, Wisconsin, leader of the La Follette group, declared there would be no surrender.

In the event of a deadlock the progressive demands are likely to be referred to a special committee for consideration and negotiation. The chief progressive demands are:

1. Revision of the House rules by a special committee, giving the House power to remove a committee chairman and further regulate legislation by a direct vote of the majority.

2. Force the all-powerful committee on rules to submit the House measures which have been reported for action.

If these rules are put into effect the progressive leaders say they will have a chance to force through the ambitious legislation program formulated at their conference yesterday.

Chief among the progressive legislative recommendations are:

Farm relief, child labor amendment to the constitution; soldier bonus paid out of excess profits and inheritance taxes; repeal of the Esch-Cummings transportation act and lower freight rates; Government control of coal, oil, sugar and other necessities of life; drastic cut in Federal taxes and conscription of capital in time of war.

R. A. Parker and family have moved from the Thompson cottage on N. McKinney street to the T. W. Brodman place on East Sumpter street, while Mr. Brodman is wintering in the Valley country.

Diamond Jubilee Brings To Life The Square Dance

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 3.—The old fashioned square dance has come back to Fort Worth, the fathers say.

Old pioneers shunned through a square dance during the recent Diamond Jubilee celebration here, and danced so lustily and with such evident pleasure that the city has instituted monthly "hops" to be held in the Chamber of Commerce, stipulating the square dance is to be a feature of each evening's program.

"THE BAT" IS FLYING THIS WAY

Wagenhals and Kemper's production of "The Bat," by Mary Robert Dinehart and Avery Hopwood will be seen here on Dec. 5th, as part of its third triumphant tour of the country.

"The Bat" is beyond question, the world's greatest mystery play. It was the forerunner of more than a score of mystery plays that have sought to equal its enormous popularity. And not one has been able to prove itself a worthy rival to the honors that have been bestowed by the theatre-going public on "The Bat."

"The Bat" comes here with a record that no other play of any type was ever able to equal. It ran for more than two years in New York; for more than a year in Chicago; for entire seasons in London, Boston and Philadelphia. In every city of the United States and foreign countries where it has been presented, it holds the record for total attendance and gross box office receipts.

"The Bat" has been played on four continents; in eleven different countries and in seven different tongues. It is internationally known and universally praised.

Those who are interested in "The Bat" have no need longer to sing its praise. That is done for them all over the world. The mere announcement of the coming of "The Bat" has, time and again, been sufficient to sell every seat for its announced engagement within a few hours of the time first word of its coming is heard.

On its present tour of the country, "The Bat" is presented in exactly the manner in which it was seen during its long engagements in the cities of the country. The production itself—the scenery and costumes are now and the cast includes the stars and Broadway favorites previously seen in the play.

The coming of "The Bat" is the outstanding feature of the local theatrical season.

"The Bat" will be presented at the Opera House Saturday, December 5th, for matinee and night performance.

CONGRESS MEETS

ions for the conduct of the Government, for payment of interest and sinking fund charges on the public debt, Congress will be called on at this session to pass on the following questions:

Immigration—The present 3 per cent quota law expires June 30, and must either be replaced with a new law or extended for another year.

Taxation—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has recommended, and President Coolidge is expected to support a program of tax reduction based on the theory that unearned incomes should bear a heavier proportion of the income tax than earned incomes.

Farm Legislation.

Farm Legislation—Agriculture will demand legislation to afford relief, particularly to wheat farmers and to prevent agricultural industry generally from falling in the future into such a trap as afflicted it in recent years. This legislation promises to be a battleground.

Child Labor—The strongest efforts are being put forth by labor to have Congress adopt for presentation to the President an amendment to the Federal Constitution, to permit Congress to legislate against child labor. This is to meet the situation created by the decision by the Supreme Court of the United States child labor laws.

Older Bonus and Veterans' Care—The bonus bill, identical with the one introduced by President Harding, is being introduced at once. Its fate is tied with the tax reduction program.

Veterans' Bureau—The bill will be called on to provide for care of disabled veterans, and to pass on a report from the Senate committee investigating the veterans' bureau. This bill probably will be accompanied by legislation to better the administration of the money provided for care of disabled veterans.

Prohibition—Efforts are in prospect to amend the Volstead law to permit manufacture, sale and use of light wines and beer.

Minimum Wage—Nullification of the District of Columbia minimum wage law for women has stirred labor leaders to seek a constitutional amendment to permit minimum wage laws to be passed.

Supreme Court—Laws and proposed constitutional amendments to be presented to the Supreme Court from Congress will be considered.

Railroad Legislation.

Railroads—Various measures proposed for consolidation of the country's railroads into a few great transportation systems will be presented.

Anti-Strikes—Legislation designed to prevent future strikes and also to limit the benefits of operators and prevent strikes from being proposed.

Women—The most powerful lobby for suffrage amendment days will be the presentation of a constitutional amendment conferring on women complete economic and legal equality with men.

Philippine Islands—Another determined effort to obtain independence for the Philippines will be made. An administration as Governor may be demanded.

Amendments—A host of amendments will be introduced by the Fordney-McCumber bill, enacted last session.

Shoals—A bill will be introduced by Chairman Madden of the Appropriations Committee to build a new Government building near Muscle Shoals. Efforts will be made to dispose finally of the Shoals matter.

"WOLF WOMAN" ARMED, MAY DIE "WITH BOOTS ON."

Katherine W. Malm

Chicago police have been ordered to shoot to kill when they seek to arrest pretty Mrs. Katherine Williams Malm, Chicago's "wolf woman," whose husband has told them she is armed to the teeth, is a crack shot and has declared she will die "with her boots on." Malm, a hardened safe blower, told the police when arrested, his wife had been his accomplice in 60 crimes, including murders. Malm confessed a murder, aided by his wife, for which another man had been arrested and identified. Paradoxical as it may seem, Mrs. Malm is a mother, and neighbors say she is an ideal one.

Jewett Says That Walton Tried To Join Klan Twice

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 3.—Jack Walton, deposed Governor of Oklahoma, was never a member of the Ku Klux Klan, N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of Oklahoma, declared in testimony given before the House investigation committee.

Jewett stated that Walton twice attempted to join the organization but that his petition was denied. He declared that Walton was given the Klan obligation by Dr. W. T. Tilly, Muskogee, at the direction of Minor Merriwether, great bitan, but that Merriwether was outside his province of authority in issuing the order.

In testimony taken by the House recently, Dr. Tilly stated Walton was a Klan member-at-large and in good standing.

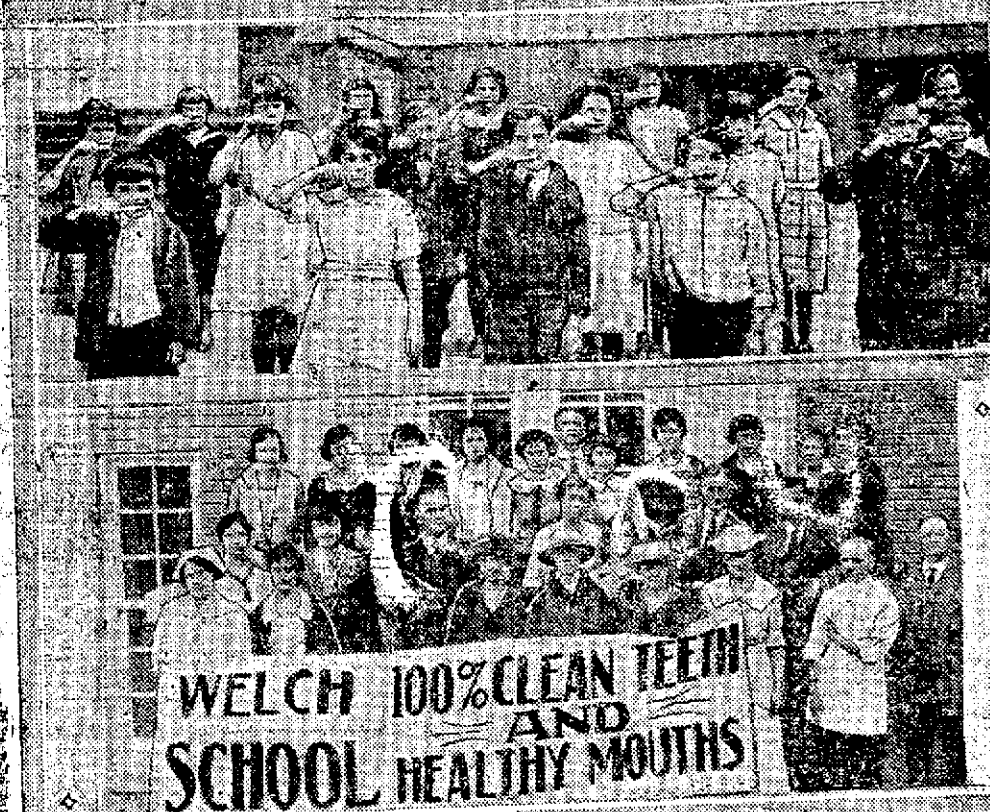

THANKSGIVING REUNION

On Thanksgiving day Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roller and Miss Julia Roller gave a dining at their home in Fairfield. The guests were brothers and sisters, a family reunion, the circle being complete with the exception of Mr. George Roller of El Paso.

More than three score years ago Mr. and Mrs. George Roller, Sr., made that spot their home. Ten children blessed that union. Three have joined the parents over there. Four have for more than a quarter of a century been highly respected residents of this city.

Spending that day in the old home around which still cling so many tender memories was to each a blessed privilege. They realized "how dear to our hearts are the scenes of our childhood," as they assembled in love and unity around that festive board laden with all good edibles like "mother used to make." Lucky indeed are they to have

Soft Coal-Mining Towns Set Good Example In Promoting Health Efforts To Check Minor School Ailments

Welch, West Virginia, is famous for other reasons than the fact that it is the center of one of America's richest coal fields. The school children of that city are attracting the attention of the dental profession nationally for the unique reason that the pupils of Welch school boast 100 per cent. clean teeth— from first graders up.

Notice the class of seven-year-olds shown above. For the benefit of a doubting camera man they are adding the finishing touch to their morning teeth wash.

Tooth brushes are part of the every-day equipment at the school, the same as a pencil box and pencils, a speller or a primary arithmetic. A dentist with a nurse assistant conducts daily drills. Needless to state, sore throat and other minor illnesses as a rule make little headway in Welch.

The healthy mouth crusade is sponsored by mining companies with large interests in that particular section of the coal state. It is a small feature of welfare work carried on in behalf of the youngsters of that community. The curriculum of the average modern school has been extended to include many more activities than a close application to the study of the three R's, but few have advanced to the stage where a tooth brush drill is a part of the day's schedule. The example at Welch might readily be followed by schools in larger cities, some dentists believe.

In a recent investigation of the educational advantages in the coal fields, made by the Bituminous Operators' Special Committee, working in co-operation with the United States Coal Commission, it was found that 93 per cent. of company-owned mining communities have an eight or nine months' school term, and county superintendents are authorized for the statement that teachers in these communities are superior to the majority of teachers in non-mining rural districts.

In 148 towns visited by trained investigators for the committee, the enrollment was 23,678 pupils, or an average of 180 to a community. Free libraries were found in 18 per cent. of the company owned towns.

brother and sister who always keep the home fires burning with a tender welcome for each when worldly cares are laid aside for a visit within those sacred walls. The day ended for too soon. As adieus were spoken, and each wended their separate ways it was with thankful hearts for this day, and the hope that the anticipated Christmas reunion may have no absent member.

Those present from Mexia were, Mr. Henry Roller, Mrs. Mollie Bessling, Mrs. Dora Phillips, Mrs. Jno. Griffith, Miss May Bessling.

STUDEBAKER

THE SPECIAL SIX TOURING 1350

EVERYONE who drives a Studebaker Special-Six marvels at the ease with which it steers.

This is due to three things: The use of Timken tapered roller bearings on the steering pivots; the easy-operating, exclusive Studebaker steering gear and a minimum of unsprung weight on the front axle.

The Studebaker Special-Six transmission, differential, rear axle, and all four wheels are also completely equipped with Timken bearings.

No other touring car priced under $5600 uses as complete installation of Timken bearings as the Special-Six.

This is an example of the quality that is built into every detail of the Special-Six. Studebaker spares no expense to make it the market's outstanding value in a five-passenger car.

Get behind the wheel of any car you plan to consider. Then compare its steering and riding qualities with the Studebaker Special-Six. Call—or phone—and we'll bring a car to your door so you can make this test yourself.

Senate Adjourns After Brief Session In Honor Of Deceased Members

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Disorganized, threatened with deadlock, and divided into bitter factions, the Sixty-Eighth Congress met at noon. The progressive plan to prevent anything being done by the House except merely assembling. While the progressives cannot organize the House, they are determined to prevent republicans or democrats organizing until their demands are met. Republican leaders believe their majority will permit organization without either coercing or yielding to the progressives. Progressive leaders declare they will insist that the House rules shall be liberalized. The Senate adjourned after meeting out of respect to Senators who died since the last Senate met. The new members will be sworn in.

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 3.—A calm, determined young man sat in the county jail here today and offered his body for sale.

And his price is money enough to get his war-time "buddy" out of jail.

George Vexant, facing trial for the murder of his fiancée, Miss Louise Floquet, is the "dealer in death." He killed the girl as he held her in his arms on the front porch of her home.

"I begged her to come back to me—and she laughed. Then I killed her," is his only explanation of the crime.

Vexant wants to die for the crime. He wants to dispense with the formality of a trial and die in the electric chair. When life has been shocked from his body, he wants to sell it to the highest bidder—doctors, hospitals, anyone who will pay the price.

"How much do you think my body should be worth?" he asks. "Enough to get my buddy, Robert Skewes, held on a misdemeanor charge out of jail? I am tired of life. I am better off dead than alive to him. I want to die. And so, why not?"

Last week, Vexant gave all the money he had—$97.50—to a friend to get Skewes out on bail. But the friend was held up and the money stolen.

Vexant, a former French aviator, was wounded seven times during the war. His parents, wealthy people of Vichy, France, know nothing of his plight. If he dies he wants his mother to be told he died in a plane crash.

His trial is scheduled to be started today—but it means nothing to him. His "buddy" is in trouble. Vexant, his only friend, is facing what he believes to be certain death.

He asks: "How much will you offer? I must get my 'buddy' out of jail!"

Daugherty Asks Coolidge For Pardon For Craig

Thad McLain Wildcat Is Bailing

The Thad McLain in its No. 1 Green well, 4 miles east of Teague Sunday was bailing at about 2500 feet with about 1000 feet more to bail. The casing is holding up very satisfactory and the bailer shows encouraging when the bailer is brought to the surface. The next few days should be "critical." Officials of the Thad McLain company feel very encouraged by the showings thus far encountered and it is hoped that as the bailer goes to the bottom that the well will do as it has shown it might be capable of doing.

As a result of the encouraging showings encountered in this well it is known that leasing activity is increasing as several blocks of acreage are being made up with other blocks being under the preliminary stage and it is hoped within a short time to announce several locations to be made on these blocks.

Despite the rain that fell Sunday night during service hours, a goodly number attended church services Sunday.

Lawson Sewell is confined in the Brown Hospital. It is sincerely hoped that he will be able to be out again within the next few days.

Miss Jimanda Bowden of Jacksonville is on a visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Meador of this city. She is a sister to Mrs. Meador.

The heavy rains are causing the roads in this section to wash considerably. Commissioner John Kennedy, however, will be on them as soon as the rain stops.

Conversion Of Funds Charged Against Banker

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 3.—The trial of H. E. Byrne, president of the defunct Security State Bank which closed its doors more than a year ago, opened with a motion by defense to quash the indictment on the ground that Byrne is only civilly liable, if at all, for the bank's failure. The indictment charges Byrne with alleged conversion of funds and the acceptance of deposits when he knew the bank was insolvent. The guaranty fund is said to have been taxed more than $600,000 to pay off depositors.

TEXARKANA, Tex., Dec. 3.—The stage is set for the opening of the Golden Jubilee to commemorate the semi-centennial of the founding of Texarkana this morning. Final arrangements were completed Saturday.

The event will start with a spectacular parade after which the gates of the exposition will be thrown open and the celebration begun.

Posses And Dogs Trail 13 Escaped Prisoners

LANSING, Kans., Dec. 5.—(United Press).—Posses led by blood hounds today attempted to follow trails of thirteen prisoners who escaped from Kansas penitentiary by burrowing through an abandoned tunnel.

News of the escape spread rapidly throughout the district and a great cordon of officers, nearly fifty miles in diameter, was drawn up. Peace officers in every village were on guard throughout the night. Every passing train was stopped and carefully looked over. Two freight trains and a passenger had stopped at Lansing from the time the prisoners escaped until it was discovered they were gone.

A check of the prison records showed Castro was an inmate at the prison at the time the old tunnel was filled up and possibly at that time marked it for future use.

In picking his companions, Castro chose men who had good prison records and were in for only "short stretches." None had more than twenty years to serve, but all had been committed in recent years.

Castro himself was classed as a "model prisoner."

The prisoners braved suffocation and drowning as they dug their way through the narrow tunnel. In several places indications were that they had been completely stopped with the dogs lost the trail of the refuge and the men had to claw their way through. Discarded garments four miles from Lansing. The trail was from Lansing and was marked.

VICTORY IS IN SIGHT

Houston is today gladly proclaiming to the world that her citizens have gone over the top by oversubscribing the $500,000 fund to go into a community chest. The oversubscription amounted to $40,000, giving that city $540,000 for the charity needs of Houston during the next twelve months. The success of the drive indicates that Houston is fundamentally and financially sound, else such a huge sum could not have been raised so easily and so successfully with such little effort.

Mexia citizens today are attempting to raise $5,300 for the same purpose. The committees of big hearted citizens both men and women, went out of Jesse McLendon's office this morning determined to carry the campaign to a successful culmination before the shades of night fall Tuesday. If they can put it over today, so much the better.

This city is thus seeking to raise about one one hundredth as much as Houston has raised already for the Salvation Army and all charity needs. Mexia has 10,000 population and Houston has about 175,000, according to liberal estimates. Should Mexia seek to raise in the same proportion as Houston, this city's quota would be over $30,000.

According to W. R. Landrum, Chairman of the Committees, the campaign so far is bringing to light again the fine spirit of generosity possessed by our people.

The campaign, sure to succeed, again demonstrates that the people of Mexia believe in civic cooperation, which should not be lost in any endeavor. It shows that citizens are very much alike; that men and women respond to the same broad influences, and that service to humanity is a magnet that draws all of us. The call to such a service was heard, clear and like, during the war years and then it was, not only in Mexia, but throughout the Union, that such a call proved its efficacy in promoting unity, harmony and brotherly love which lend lustre to life and its varied experiences.

The News again expresses faith in this wonderful citizenship. They will be weighed in the balances during the next few hours but will not be found wanting. Mexia will take care of her own. For Mexia is in America.

Let every citizen prove himself worthy of such a citizenship.

THE EDITORIAL OF THE DAY

OUR TAX PROBLEMS.
Denison Herald

From the first organized human society the tax problem has been a vexatious matter. As civilization becomes more complex these problems increase in magnitude and intricacy. Taxation among our colonies was troublesome, but not so onerous as it came to be within the next one hundred years. Today, in every city and every state in the Union the raising of money for carrying on government expenses is not only serious but burdensome to the point of sacrifice. In some instances it has almost amounted to confiscation.

But it costs much to pass from the state of savagery to that of civilization. The Indian had no tax problems to worry over. No revenues were needed for the crude semi-organic society of his tribal existence. He required and exacted the duty of hunting, skill with bow and arrow, endurance and courage of the men, and domestic slavery of his women. Together they contributed all that was necessary to maintain a loose tribal government. But when even the Indian began to take over the customs and privileges of higher civilization, he imposed upon himself certain obligations to the mass-life of his tribe which could be met only by the common purse in some form of medium of exchange.

As man advanced into still nobler states of civilized society, he has found his neighborly obligations increasing. The individual good did not pass away, nor was it wholly merged into the popular welfare. But the infinite intermingling and overlapping of interests of all individual created a universal bond of fellowship and protection which is always too valuable to lose and which must be paid for in order to be maintained.

The government of the state of Texas today costs at least ten times the annual budget of thirty years ago. The same is true of national expenditures. The machinery of civilization is constantly developing new conditions, unique relationships, popular demands and subdivisions of government necessary to prevent injustice and maintain human rights in the midst of ever developing causes of friction and dangers of trespass.

Doubtless there is a constant tendency to wastefulness and extravagance from the public treasury, whether in city, county, state or nation. But the increase of taxes is inevitable with the increased intricacy of governmental machinery. The growth of a nation demands ever-increasing expenditures, just as the growth of the infant calls for increased outlay for maintenance. We shall never see any system that will remove all injustice from taxation. It is humanly impossible to remove utterly every condition that unavoidably imposes heavier burdens on some than on others. A low tax rate is not necessarily a sign of prosperity or of well-being. It may indicate stagnation and depression in business, religion and even existence. The high tax rate at least offers better means for advancing all improvements that tend to popular convenience. Without money no governmental machinery can be operated, any more than mill machinery may be operated without expenses. And it is not just for the citizen to complain about high taxes if public affairs are wisely administered, and if the people get the worth of their money in public utilities.

LITTLE FOXES
HOBBIES

Again and again experience shows that hobbies are the things of which success is made. The American business man will cheat himself and limit his growth, if he fails to ride a hobby. A hobby should be ridden. It will bring the individual to some place. Rockefeller once said that the reason he got where he was was because he never remained where he was at. He had a hobby. It carried him to a great goal. In a small country town in the South and there once worked a clerk in a store. He was just an ordinary fellow, his friends said. Yet, he had a husky ambition to get somewhere, to move ahead. The store was small. The town had less than 3,000 population, but these facts did not stifle the fires of ambition that blazed in his earnest soul. So, after all, he was not just an "ordinary fellow". The story goes that the management of the establishment bought a machine to duplicate by means of stencils, typewritten letters and hand lettered sales literature. Tom, which we will say was the clerk's name, was at once impressed with the possibilities of the machine. That machine became his hobby. Long after closing hours he experimented with it. He became so expert that he finally turned out work that excelled any ever put out on such a duplicating machine. Then, he conceived a house organ. The house organ began to increase the business of that store by 30 per cent per year. Sample copies of the work were sent to the manufacturer of the machine. A well known business magazine sent a man down to the little city to see Tom. The result of the interview was a story. Then came an offer from the manufacturer to go to an Ohio city and act as sales manager of one of the largest concerns in the country. Today, Tom is filling that job and is doing it exceptionally well. Some jump from a clerk in a little town much less than the size of Mexia to the sales management of a nationally known concern! All because he had a hobby and rode it. The future will hold many other thrilling stories of triumph. Will you be one of those to succeed?

WHY INDUSTRY IS MISUNDERSTOOD

Geo. E. Roberts Tells How Co-operative Character of Corporations Is Obscured.

RADICAL AGITATION RESULTS

Maintenance of Present Industrial System Necessary to Maintain Present Standards of Comfort for All the People, He Says.

The modern industrial system is at bottom a co-operative organization, but this fact is obscured by the complexity of huge enterprises, George E. Roberts, noted authority on business and finance, declared in a recent speech before the American Bankers Association Convention at Atlantic City, N. J.

"The primitive man knew that the harder he worked the more he would have," Mr. Roberts said. "When a man exchanged work with a neighbor he had the whole transaction under his eyes. But when a man works with thousands of others for a great corporation he doesn't see any definite relationship between what he does and what he gets. He doesn't know whether he is getting a fair share of the industrial results or not, and he suspects not."

"The modern industrial system is essentially co-operative, but you cannot have effective co-operation without understanding. Because people do not see the industrial organization as a whole we have the tendency for society to break up into groups and blocs and unions and organizations of one kind and another, many of whom are trying to advance their own interests at the expense of society as a whole. The population of this country today could not be supported in the state of comfort to which it is accustomed without the modern, specialized organization."

Bolshevism in Russia
"The extremity of social disorganization has been seen in Russia, where has been enacted the greatest tragedy in the history of the world. What happened there will happen everywhere unless there is a development of the capacity of people to work together and stand each other."

"In its final form the revolution in Russia was against what is called the capitalist system, or the private ownership of property and direction of industry. The results of the revolution are so calamitous in Russia as to give a check to revolutionary tendencies in other countries. Yet the economic

"The motive behind all this agitation is the desire to establish equality. The social struggles of the past have been for political equality. Now the demand is for equality in possession, equality in incomes, equality in the management of industrial affairs. There is no argument against the aspirations of men for better social conditions, but radical ideas result from certain economic fallacies. One relates to the employment and service of private capital. Men read about vast sums of wealth belonging to individuals, and think of these sums as devoted exclusively to the owners. In fact wealth employed in production for the public market is rendering service to the entire community, no matter who owns it."

"The whole radical argument is like claiming that nobody ever got any benefit from the development of the steam engine but the owners of steam engines. Of course, the theory only needs to be stated for the fallacy to be apparent. The man who works for wages is benefited by every investment of capital which increases and cheapens the supply of the things for which his wages are spent."

The Service of Capital
"It is a fundamental truth that all productive property, although privately owned, is part of the equipment of society, by which its wants are supplied."

"The progress of the past has been accomplished under the individualistic system. The theory of this system is that every one shall have for his own, as nearly as may be, that which results from his own efforts. It is a system calculated to stimulate the initiative, call out the energies and develop the ability of each individual. He is free as to his undertakings; there are no restrictions except that he must seek his own gains by activities that are serviceable to the community as a whole, and he is inspired to labor not simply by the desire for personal advantage, but by the desire to provide for loved ones, by the impulse to self-expression, to realize and develop his natural abilities, and by the ambition to achieve, to win distinction and to render service."

"It does not promise equality. Unless there is equality in production, in service, in effort, in resolution and in self-denial, why should there be equality in the division of results?"

"The justification of individualism, however, is not merely in what it allows to the superior individual, but in the results that inure to all. It is in the interest of all to secure the most effective organization, the most effective management and the largest possible production. These cannot be had by adopting the fiction that all have equal ability for any position, or by any other system than that which judges men by their individual qualifications."

change in that august body.

Only three men who have served more than a score of years are due to appear in the new senate picture. The other ninety-three senators would be regarded as newcomers under the old rule when constituencies let senators die in harness.

Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican leader of Massachusetts, is the oldest inhabitant of the Senate in point of service, with 39 years behind him. Senator Warren of Wyoming really

Americanism Fostered In Soft Coal Mining Towns By Healthful and Happy Home Conditions

This sturdy and completely-equipped football team, posing in approved fashion around the coach, is not the product of any high-priced private school, as might well appear at first sight. On the contrary, they are the pride of the local high school in a town that few Americans probably ever heard of. It is Holden, West Virginia, whose inhabitants total just two thousand, and every one of whom draws his living from the mine that created the community.

Because Holden's sole reason for existence is the fact the adjacent earth holds soft coal; because no one ever thought of settling there until a company was formed to mine it, it was up to the company, in order to attract employees, to provide some place for them to live. But they were not satisfied with just supplying shelter. They went further and furnished schools for the children; hospital facilities for the families and all the other conveniences that make for happy, healthy life. The high school which is a model one, boasts a faculty of ten teachers, including O. P. Westfall, the coach, seen posing here with his team. That the teachers are themselves well-provided for may be seen from the smile on the face of Miss Fay G. Castleman, a college woman who takes care of the children's mathematical studies.

Holden, however, is not the only town built by coal operators for their employees, that can put ordinary rural communities to shame. Miss Bonnie Williams, R.N., the active nurse on the right, is the surgical supervisor and anesthetist at the Guyon Valley Hospital, Logan, West Virginia. Miss Williams, who comes from Wichita, Kans., graduated from the Kessler-Hatfield Hospital of Huntington, W. Va., for no nurse is allowed in these mining communities who does not measure up to the highest standards of the profession. The charge, however, for her services to the patient is exactly $1.00 a month—provided he is a miner.

The fact that neither the Logan nor Holden coal operators are exceptional in this matter of providing for the well-being of its employees, is proved by a survey recently made by six independent women investigators of fourteen coal fields scattered over eleven states. They reported that every community visited had educational facilities for both white and colored children, and in every community also provision had been made for medical care.

got to the S centerfirst got to the Senate first. He did a two-year hitch before his present term began in 1895. Senator Simmons of North Carolina, the Democratic nestor, did not come to the Senate until six years later.

With so many new faces, the Senate will present a vastly different picture. In the place of Knute Nelson, the old Viking, with his snowy chin whiskers, will be another product of Scandinavia—Magnus Johnson, the real dirt farmer who actually milks his own cows.

Two Oldtimers Gone.

Two oldtimers who came in to-morrow in 1899—Culberson of Texas and McCumber of North Dakota—went out together. The Texan, who had tottered with palsy for ten years, was defeated as a result of the big case rolled up by an impeached governor of the Lone Star State, and Senator Mayfield, whose seat is under a cloud, won the race. McCumber, whose widely separated syllables style of oratory was long a Senate attraction, was defeated by Senator Frazier, who was recalled as Non-Partisan League governor of his state.

Death has taken Senator Dillingham of Vermont, whose youthful figure belied his 80 years. The nestor of the Senate, Senator Page, also of the Green Mountain State, a few months the senior of Dillingham, has quit. In his place comes former Representative Green, with his blond bangs. Porter Dale has also been elevated from the House in the place of Dillingham.

Hitchcock of Nebraska, an aristocrat in appearance, but a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, has given way to Howell, the progressive Republican. The deliberate but determined Myers of Montana is succeeded by the fiery Wheeler. The lean, bald Poindexter, now ambassador to Peru, has been replaced by the pudgy, blond Dill of Washington, formerly in the House. Pomerene of the Websterian dome is gone. In his place Dr. Fess of Ohio will regale the Senate with precise diction. Townsend of Michigan will be missing. Woodbridge Ferris will be there to remind the Senate that it has been a long, long time between Democrats in the Wolverine state.

John Sharp Williams is down in Mississippi with his books and his birds, tending his cotton and mint patches. Herbert Stevens must uphold the honor of Mississippi. Dr. Copeland is there to give the Senate health hints instead of Calder the builder. The athletic France has been replaced by Bruce of Maryland.

Frelinghuysen, the dry, has given way to Edwards, who promised to make New Jersey "as wet as the Atlantic Ocean." Kellogg, in staid knickers, will soon be bowing at the Court of St. James, while Shipstead, the dentist, is representing Minnesota in the Senate.

Ralston of Indiana succeeds Postmaster General New in the Senate, but the Hoosier candidate for President must go to predecessor when he wants to get a postmaster appointed. And Sutherland has in his place Neely, the young West Virginia mountaineer.

New Faces Seen In The Senate

A Nightgown with a Lace Border

An Exceedingly Attractive Style
Of course it was inevitable that the hertha collar should find its way to the realm of lingerie, because all of the smart outer decorations sooner or later appear upon bodice ornaments. This lace is certainly exceedingly attractive.

The woman who clings to soft cotton fabrics for the making of her lingerie is surely justified when she makes such an attractive nightgown as this one. It calls for three yards of fine nainsook and two and one-half yards of fine lace. The bodice and sleeves are made of the nainsook and the lace is used for the collar, cuffs and hem. The collar is made of lace and the lace is used for the cuffs and hem. The collar is made of lace and the lace is used for the cuffs and hem.

The first illustration shows how the lace hertha is joined to the neck of the nightgown. First gather the neck, drawing the threads until it is in the desired size. Catch the gathering threads and then run another

Very Smart in Wool Crepe

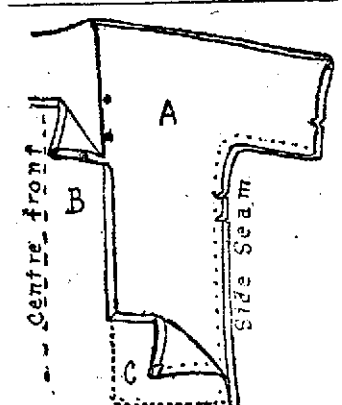

This dress looks well in any material, cotton, wool or silk and it is both practical and smart. The trimming is in a dark tone of the same color and, of course, varies according to the material selected for the dress.

Perhaps some getting mother would like to carry out this model in taffeta, while another more practical would select gingham for the purpose. But a happy medium between the two would be wool crepe in a becoming shade of Copenhagen blue trimmed with silk braid in very dark blue.

The front panel of the dress is cut in one with the skirt, the sides being stitched down to form pockets. The edges of the panel and the square neckline are stitched with the braid, while ribbon in the same shade of the braid forms the collar and cuffs. Holding in the full at the waist is a string belt, tied at the back.

The figure shows one-half of the design, with the side-fastening, the kimono sleeve and the pocket given in special detail. The left side of the front should be bound or hemmed and then snap-hooks added for the fastenings. If preferred buttons and buttonholes may be used—it is purely a matter of individual taste. There should be at least two snap-hooks placed about three inches apart, to allow an easy opening. Frequently, when the space allowed to slip the head through is small, the dress is easily stretched, if not torn and rendered unfit for service.

The sleeves are stitched along with the side seam of the dress before it is bound. The pocket is bound before the side seam is finished, so that the raw edges may be taken into the side seam.

Youthful Frocks Take to Ribbons

Georgette Is Used for This Design

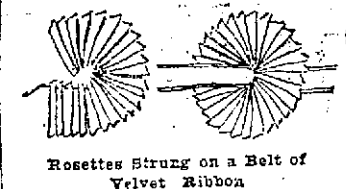

Georgette and ribbon, or is it ribbon and georgette? Whichever it is, both combine to produce some of the loveliest of youthful frocks this season. This model in pale yellow has a girlish of burgundy ribbon velvet, with ornate rosettes and the color scheme is as attractive as it is unusual.

One finds some of the most unusual color combinations in frocks sent over from Paris for youthful wearers. The materials are so light and airy and the foundations so shimmering that many of the girlish models are too beautiful for description. This dress is carried out in pale canary color georgette, mounted upon china silk. It has straight lines, the side panels being attached to the seams and allowed to hang below the hem of the skirt in cascade effect. Finishing the mark is a round collar, machine-hemstitched and the kimono sleeves correspond with the collar. For a girl of 12 years about three yards of Georgette are needed to copy this design.

The belt is an unusual detail, yet exceedingly simple to copy. For the foundation one must have two and three-quarter yards of ribbon velvet. One-half yard of grosgrain ribbon is needed for each rosette and there may be as many as the fancy dictates. If the wearer is slim, it is well to have the rosettes about 2 1/2 inches apart; if stout, the distance should be increased to avoid the appearance of bulkiness.

Take the grosgrain ribbon and gather it along one edge. Draw the threads together until the edges meet. Leave a space in the center large enough for the belt to be slipped through without wrinkling. The edges of the ribbon may be finished with buttonhole embroidery, or they may be sewed together instead of being overlapped.

The lower edge of the dress is hemstitched, one row of the stitching being used for decorative purposes only and the other for holding the hem in place. The home dressmaker should remember that colors are in high favor this season, for youthful frocks as well as those for older persons. It is a difficult problem to keep informed on all the names that fashion gives to various colors. As a rule, however, they are so typical that their name suggests to the mind the idea intended to be conveyed.

LIFE ON TEXAS FARMS IS BETTER THAN IT USED TO BE

The movement that is being fostered by governmental agencies in cooperation with the national associations of the public utilities to make public utility services available on the farms holds promise of a great change in the manner of living among people in the rural districts. Already, the telephone has connected the farms of exas with the city. The electric railway and the motor bus are making for adequate transportation of farm people and farm products. Throughout the natural gas regions of Texas the service of natural gas on the farm is increasing all the time.

Farm life in Texas has changed much in the past ten years. It will show a much greater change for the better during the coming ten years.

There will be no isolation. There will be no lack of variety to rural life. The telephone, radio, motors, electricity, gas, transportation when it is wanted—all are fast coming to the farm. And in short time the farm will have every advantage of the city without the crowds, cramped homes, inadequate breathing spaces, and high cost of living.

Texas people who came from the farms may not make a general movement back to the farms. But in the present and coming years the incentive of farm people to move to the city is being removed by the services of modern science. The public services of the utilities will soon be as much a factor in life on the farm in Texas as they are now necessities in the cities of Texas.

ARTICLE No. 5

If players stopped to realize how many games and rubbers are "chucked," that is, lost by bad bidding or bad play, they would be more anxious to improve their game. One expert claims that four out of every five rubbers are "chucked."

Y dealt and bid one spade. B bid two hearts and Z bid three clubs. This is a better bid than two no-trump, even with a double stopper in the heart suit. Y has a void diamond suit and only one spade so that a no-trump bid might go very badly. A passed three clubs and Y correctly bid three diamonds. B bid three hearts and Z, having located the diamond suit, now bid three no-trump. A mistake of bidding four diamonds. This was a bad call, for the bidding had indicated Z's double stopper in the heart suit and therefore a better chance for game in no-trump. B passed and Z, feeling that Y could not go game in diamonds, decided to bid five clubs. A passed and Y suddenly decided to bid five no-trump—another bad bid. Needless to say, Z could have made five clubs or three no-trump but was unable to make five no-trump. Y "chucked" this sure game by the worst kind of bidding.

Z dealt and passed. A bid one heart, Y one no-trump and B passed. Z now bid two spades. A three diamonds. Y bid three spades and B four hearts. Z now bid four spades. A five hearts and Y doubled. Under ordinary circumstances Y's double would have been sound but the fact that A was bidding two suits and to such high bids, should have indicated to Y that A held a freak hand. When a player can bid five in a suit without the ace king, he must have a very unusual hand. As a result, A made five hearts doubled while Y-Z could have made five spades. It goes to show how many games are "chucked" by bad bidding. Since an error in judgment in the bidding is always more costly than in the play, one cannot be too careful.

Spades are trumps and Z is playing the hand. The problem is to make four spades against an error after A leads the jack of diamonds. The solution will appear in the next article.

HOME DRESSMAKING
By JEANNE ROLAND
(Copyright 1923 by Pen-Art Service, Inc.)

Distinctly Up-to-the-Minute

A Blouse of Radiant Silk
Select a radiant material and make it into a simple overblouse and you have a garment that will enrich the plainest of separate skirts, and the foundation for a charming ensemble costume. Either brocade, moire crepe or mirror velvet could be used for this new Paris design.

The exquisite coloring of the new silks and satins, not to mention the velvets, inspires clever dressmakers with many splendid ideas for separate blouses. Here is one of the most distinctive variations of the wrap-around blouse and there are other features quite as interesting as the method of adjustment—namely the banding neckband, the Riviera sleeve and the narrow slit at the front to disclose a vest of contrasting fabric, if desired. To make this blouse for bust size 36 or 38 inches one must have two and five-eighths yards of material 36 or 40 inches wide.

Joining Neck-Edge to Neckband

the neck of the blouse, holding in whatever fullness there may be and trying to prevent any fullness at all, if possible. Turn the band over to the reverse side of the blouse, turn under the edge, baste, then sew down with very fine hemming stitches. Be careful not to let the stitches show through to the right side of the material. If the material is very soft, a band of ribbon may be inserted in the neckband to give it a little support.

The belt is cut in one with the front of the blouse and is carried around to the under-arm seam to be fastened.

Miners' Families Given Good Care And Opportunities in Towns Built By Bituminous Coal Operators

Boy Scouts everywhere have common objectives, but the scout movement has particular significance in coal mining communities, for their "first aid" courses may be brought into play at any time and their general training in safety measures helps them to keep their "dads" more keenly interested. The top picture, taken at Eckman, West Virginia, in the heart of one of the most important bituminous fields, shows a typical phase of community life for boys of a mining town. A scout patrol learning "first aid." The lower view, however, shows another activity among the boys of the mining towns, a picnic party for the youngsters in one of the "company" trucks at Widen, West Virginia.

But whether for boys or girls, young or old, the mining towns compare favorably in their opportunities for health, education or recreation, with those of many rural and urban communities, although they may seem to lead an isolated life. In a vast majority of communities which the companies built for their employees, the housing problem was met by the construction of comfortable homes with modern labor-saving and sanitary equipment for which the miners pay vastly lower rents than obtain in other sections for houses with the same conveniences. In addition, the companies have provided schools, churches, recreation centers, health services, hospitals, clubs and garages as a part of their co-operative relations with the workers.

These activities have led to community spirit and it is not unusual to find mining towns where prizes are offered by the companies for the most attractively kept grounds about the homes of their employees. Contrary to popular belief, the miner is not a wanderer. Proof of this is shown in the experience of one company which "seldom has an empty house unless someone dies," and whose employees in many instances have been with them in one town since the mines were opened in that town.

BIG WILLIAMS PLANS RESUMPTION OF DRILL
Plans were going forward to resume drilling on the Big Williams Rosson well today. In th rain Saturday night, drilling suspended, until machinery parts could be replaced if found necessary, in order to drill cautiously to an early completion.

GAS DOSE A LOT OF THE HOUSEWORK
The average gas bill for the more than nine million customers of gas companies estimated to be $2.60 per month per customer, or about 8.6 cents a day for a 24-hour cooking, heating and lighting service, says the Texas Public Service Information Bureau.

Approaching the subject from a different angle and using official Government statistics—those of the Census of Manufacturers for 1921, the latest available—we find that in that year the value of manufactured gas sold was $411,195,503. During the same period the American people spent $7,849,600,000 for food, $2,710,000,000 for clothing, $539,667,000 for furniture, $1,329,914,000 for printed literature, $1,671,387,000 for automobiles, $496,123,000 for tires and inner tubes, $527,259,000 for candies and ice cream, $479,723,000 for butter, $166,600,000 for refined cane sugar, and $806,748,865 for cigars and cigarettes, or nearly twice as much as was spent for gas service. In other words, the American people are getting one of the most important and necessary services in daily life—one that cooks their meals and heats their rooms—at half the cost of the daily smoke.

STEWART COACH OF UNIVERSITY BASKET BALL QUINTET

By MOULTON COBB
AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 3.—With football put aside until next September, the University of Texas students are beginning to ask questions concerning basketball prospects for this year. The quintet will be coached by E. J. "Doc" Stewart, the Longhorn coach who has just led the football team through an undefeated season.

The Longhorn basketball team has not won the Southwestern Conference championship for several years. However, each season the team has been a contender for honors. L. Theo Bellmont, director of athletics at the University, coached the team for several years until the past season. In 1922-23 the squad was directed by Milton Romney.

Under Coach Stewart this year, the Longhorn supporters are expecting better things. Stewart is real veteran at basketball. He was a good player of the game more than a score of years ago. He has grown up with the game. In speaking of basketball recently, he said:

"I admit I am a much better basketball coach than I am a football coach. I can assure the student body of the University a strong team."

Coach Stewart will have several regulars of former years around whom to build his team. Among the 1923 players who are out for the team are Bobby Robertson of Dallas, captain; Alfonso Ragland of Dallas, one of the best players in the state last season; Lester Settegast of Houston, another star, and Abe Curtis of Fort Worth. From the 1922 team Stewart will have Emanuel Ponsford of El Paso, who is even better known for his pitching ability on the baseball team.

A Distinctive Note in Blouses

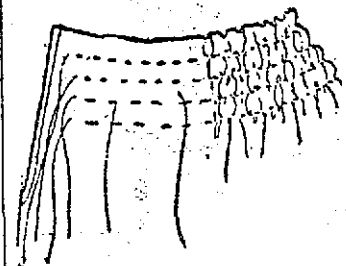

Lovely Model in Gray Satin Crepe

This French overblouse chooses to be fashioned of atmosphere gray crepe satin, with the cross-stitch trimming done in the bright colors expressive of Chinese embroidery. It requires but little time to make and can be carried out in a wide variety of materials.

Note the simple lines of this separate blouse, although it is classed with the dressy models associated with the three-piece costume so much in demand this season. It is made of atmosphere gray crepe satin, size 36 or 38 inches bust calling for 2 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide. A simple cross-stitch border about the lower edge of the blouse and on the sleeves and pocket give it all of the elaboration that the mode requires. The round neck, instead of being finished with a limerick collar, as so often happens just now, is daintily bordered, the gathers extending only from shoulder to shoulder at the front. Use silk thread the same color as the crepe for gathering. Allow several inches at the end, so that the gathers may be let out or drawn in when the blouse is being fitted to the figure. For the gathers, take fine stitches, going over and under each alternate warp and woof thread, depending, of course, upon the direction in which one is working, whether with or against the grain. On very fine or closely woven materials, when working on a straight line, draw one of the threads and then the needle easily weaves over and under the remaining threads. The cross-stitch is very easy to make also. It consists simply of carrying one slant stitch across the angle of the other. The beauty of doing cross-stitch embroidery depends upon having all of the upper stitches run in the same direction. A clever mingling of the colors adds greatly to the effectiveness of cross-stitch embroidery. On a background of gray, as in the instance of this blouse, the suggested colors for the embroidery would be light and dark blue, a lighter shade of gray and a touch of coral or canary.

The kimono sleeves are made longer by adding full deep cuffs of the satin. These cuffs are in turn gathered and stitched into a band that is embroidered in cross-stitch. If preferred, the pocket may be omitted, but it is a smart feature of most of the new blouses.

Prominent Citizen Died Suddenly At Home Sun. Night

John C. Yeldell, a long time citizen of this section and for several years a leading business man of Mexia, died suddenly at his home on Sumpter street Sunday night of heart failure.

Mr. Yeldell had been in poor health for several months, and spent some time in a sanitarium under treatment, but had been at his home for the past few months and had about recovered from his ailment, a foot trouble, and was able to get around without the use of crutches.

He is survived by his wife and several children, and a large circle of relatives and friends.

The funeral will occur Tuesday under the direction of the John R. Corley Undertaking company.

Walter Phillips who has been with the Central Texas Light & Power company as cashier for the past two years has accepted a position with the Guardian Trust company of Houston and left Mexia Sunday to take up his work there. His many friends regret that he has left Mexia but predict a bright future for him in his new field of work.

Mrs. Jno. Neece returned to her home in Dallas Sunday afternoon after several days spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy McKee.

RAIN STOPS WORK ON HOME BUILDING

On account of the inclement weather in charge of the construction of the Hughes' demonstration home, has called the work on the home off for the day. As soon as rain subsides, construction will continue. The J. R. Neece Lumber Company will be glad to discuss with anyone interested in the home the details of expense and show the plans for the beautiful place. It is not to be a mansion, just a humble home, the kind Mexia needs more of and the kind that builds towns into cities.

A. A. Sawyer, express messenger of the Cut Off, has bought the De Witt Lamb home at the corner of Grayson and Canton streets, and moved his family here from Shiloh. Mr. Lamb has moved his family to a cottage on Grayson street.

Mrs. Allen Hatch returned Sunday afternoon from Bryan and the wedding of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Moore.

HOUSTON POLICE RECORDS

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 3.—Twenty thousand persons have been arrested for up to Nov. 1 of this year. Police records show.

This is four thousand over last year for a similar period.

Stricter traffic laws and more automobiles caused the increases, Chief Tom Goodson believes.

Big Caucas Of G. O. P. Heads Met Saturday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Progressive and conservative forces came to grips today in the Republican caucus in the House.

Upon the outcome of the battle to be waged behind closed doors, depends:

1. Prompt organization of the House by administration forces, permitting President Coolidge to deliver his message to Congress on Wednesday as scheduled.

2. The fate of administration legislation recommended in the President's message, which must have solid Republican backing to pass. The conservative slate consists of Representatives Gillett of Massachusetts, for speaker; Longworth of Ohio, majority leader; Frank Scott of Michigan, Republican whip and Sidney Anderson, Minnesota, chairman of the caucus.

Progressive leaders, however, declared the administration will be blocked. They intend to present their demands for committee assignments and liberalization of House rules.

Until these demands are met they say nothing will be done toward House organization.

Claiming from twenty to fifty progressive votes, Representative Nelson, Wisconsin, leader of the La Follette group, declared there would be no surrender.

In the event of a deadlock the progressive demands are likely to be referred to a special committee for consideration and negotiation. The chief progressive demands are:

1. Revision of the House rules by a special committee, giving the House power to remove a committee chairman and further regulate legislation by a direct vote of the majority.

2. Force the all-powerful committee on rules to submit to the House measures which have been reported for action.

If these rules are put into effect the Progressive leaders say they will have a chance to force through the ambitious legislation program formulated at their conference yesterday.

Chief among the progressive legislative recommendations are:

Farm relief; child labor amendment to the constitution; soldier bonus paid out of excess profits and inheritance taxes; repeal of the Esch-Cummins transportation act and lower freight rates; Government control of coal, oil, sugar and other necessities of life; drastic cut in Federal taxes and conscription of capital in time of war.

Diamond Jubilee Brings To Life The Square Dance

FORT WORTH, Texas, Dec. 3.—The old fashioned square dance has come back to Fort Worth, the fathers say.

Old pioneers skinned through a square dance during the recent Diamond Jubilee celebration here, and danced so lustily and with such evident pleasure that the city has instituted monthly "hops" to be held in the Chamber of Commerce, stipulating the square dance is to be a feature of each evening's program.

"THE BAT" IS FLYING THIS WAY

Wagenhals and Kemper's production of "The Bat," by Mary Robert Dinahart and Avery Hopwood will be seen here on Dec. 8th, as part of its third triumphant tour of the country. "The Bat" is beyond question, the world's greatest mystery play. It was the forerunner of more than a score of mystery plays that have sought to trade on its enormous popularity. And not one has been able to prove itself a worthy rival to the honors that have been bestowed by the theatre-going public on "The Bat."

"The Bat" comes here with a record that no other play of any type was ever able to equal. It ran for more than two years in New York; for more than a year in Chicago; for entire seasons in London, Boston and Philadelphia. In every city of the United States and foreign countries where it has been presented, it holds the record for total attendance and gross box office receipts.

"The Bat" has been played on four continents; in eleven different countries and in seven different tongues. It is internationally known and universally praised.

Those who are interested in "The Bat" have no need longer to sing its praise. That is done for them all over the world. The mere announcement of the coming of "The Bat" has, time and again, been sufficient to sell every seat for its announced engagement within a few hours of the time first word of its coming is heard.

On its present tour of the country, "The Bat" is presented in exactly the manner in which it was seen during its long engagements in the cities of the country. The production itself—the scenery and costumes are now and the cast includes the stars and Broadway favorites previously seen in the play.

The coming of "The Bat" is the outstanding feature of the local theatrical season.

"The Bat" will be presented at the Opera House Saturday, December 8th, for matinee and night performance.

CONGRESS MEETS

sions for the conduct of the Government, for payment of interest and sinking fund charges on the public debt, Congress will be called on at this session to pass on the following questions:

Immigration—The present 3 per cent quota law expires June 30, and must either be replaced with a new law or extended for another year.

Taxation—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has recommended, and President Coolidge is expected to support a program of tax reduction based on the theory that unearned incomes should bear a heavier proportion of the income tax than earned incomes.

Farm Legislation—Agriculture will demand legislation to afford relief, particularly to wheat farmers and to prevent agricultural industry generally from falling in the future into such a slump as afflicted it in recent years. This legislation promises to be a battleground.

Child Labor—The strongest efforts are being put forth by labor to have Congress adopt for presentation to the President an amendment to the Federal Constitution, to permit Congress to legislate against child labor. This is to meet the situation created by the decision of the Supreme Court of previous child labor laws.

Soldier Bonus and Veterans' Care—A soldier bonus bill, identical with the one vetoed by President Harding, is being introduced at once. Its fate is tied with the tax reduction program. Congress will be called on to provide for care of disabled veterans, to pass on a report from the special Senatorial committee investigating the veterans' bureau. This report probably will be accompanied by legislation to better the administration of the money provided for care of disabled veterans.

Prohibition—Efforts are in prospect to amend the Volstead law to permit manufacture, sale and use of light wines and beer.

Minimum Wage—Nullification of the District of Columbia minimum wage law for women has stirred labor members to seek a constitutional amendment to permit minimum wage laws to be passed.

Supreme Court—Laws and proposed constitutional amendments to prohibit the Supreme Court from declaring any law of Congress will be discussed.

Railroad Legislation.

Railroads—Various measures providing for consolidation of the country's railroads into a few great transportation systems will be presented.

Coal—Legislation designed to prevent future strikes and also to limit the profits of operators and prevent prices soaring will be proposed.

Women—The most powerful lobby for a suffrage amendment days will be the adoption of a constitutional amendment conferring on women complete economic and legal equality with men.

Philippine Islands—Another determined effort to obtain independence for the Philippines will be made. An administration of General Leonard Wood may be demanded.

Shoals—A host of amendments will be proposed to the Fordney-McCumber tariff law, enacted last session.

Shoals—A bill will be introduced by Chairman Madden of the House Appropriations Committee to have the Government build a new power plant near Muscle Shoals. Efforts will be made to dispose finally of the Muscle Shoals matter.

JIMMIE ALLARD AT THE PALACE TONIGHT

Jimmie Allard has returned to the Palace Theatre, that means that theatregoers will have another week's fun. It will be remembered that Jimmie Allard's company played in Mexia last week to capacity houses and kept his audiences well entertained throughout his stay here.

He has returned for a week's engagement at the Palace Theatre and promises to even out do his laughing partners of last spring. The management of the theatre says that if you buy your Christmas stockings to the Palace it will be packed plum full of fun.

OLDEST MEMBER OF HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(United Press.)—Representative Isaac R. Sherwood (Dem., Ohio, oldest member of the House of Representatives, served as a member of that body 22 years before Representative Clarence J. McLeod (Rep., Mich., youngest member, was born.

Sherwood, who fought in 43 battles of the Civil War, serving 123 days under fire, is 88 years old and 60 years the senior of the "youngster" from Michigan.

McLeod, a veteran of the World War, was first elected to the House in 1921, during the 66th Congress, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Representative Nichols. He was not a candidate for re-election to the 67th Congress.

"WOLF WOMAN" ARMED, MAY DIE "WITH BOOTS ON."

Katherine W. Malm, wife of the "wolf woman."

Chicago police have been ordered to shoot to kill when they seek to arrest pretty Mrs. Katherine Williams Malm, Chicago's "wolf woman," whose husband has told them she is armed to the teeth, is a crack shot and has declared she will die "with her boots on." Malm, a hardened safe blower, told the police when arrested, his wife had been his accomplice in 60 crimes, including murders. Malm confessed a murder, aided by his wife, for which another man had been arrested and identified. Paradoxical as it may seem, Mrs. Malm is a mother, and neighbors say she is an ideal one.

POISON LIQUOR RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF THREE

Jewett Says That Walton Tried To Join Klan Twice

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 3.—Jack Walton, deposed Governor of Oklahoma, was never a member of the Ku Klux Klan, N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of Oklahoma, declared in testimony given before the House investigation committee.

Jewett stated that Walton twice attempted to join the organization but that his petition was denied. He declared that Walton was given the Klan obligation by Dr. W. T. Tilly, Muskogee, at the direction of Minor Merriwether, great bitan, but that Merriwether was outside his province of authority in issuing the order.

In testimony taken by the House recently, Dr. Tilly stated Walton was a Klan member-at-large and in good standing.

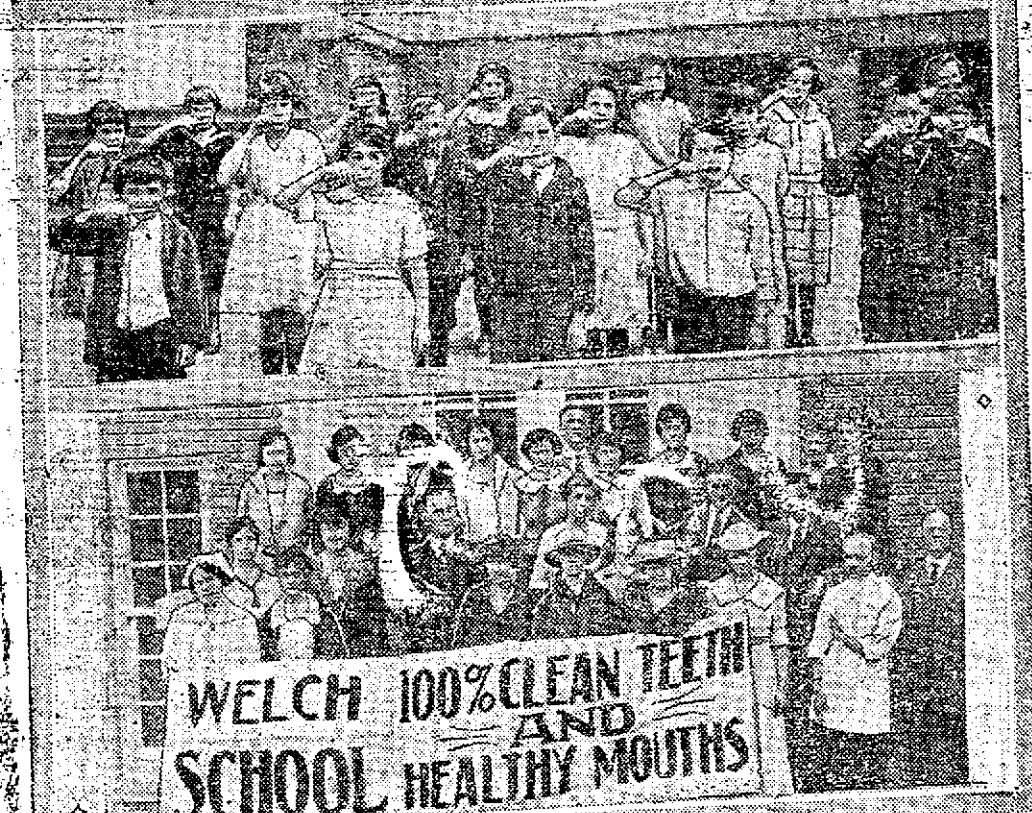

THANKSGIVING REUNION

On Thanksgiving day Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roller and Miss Julia Roller gave a dining at their home in Fairfield. The guests were brothers and sisters, a family reunion, the circle being complete with the exception of Mr. George Roller of El Paso.

More than three score years ago Mr. and Mrs. George Roller, Sr., made that spot their home. Ten children blessed that union. Three have joined the parents over there. Four have for more than a quarter of a century been highly respected residents of this city.

Spending that day in the old home around which still cling so many tender memories was to each a blessed privilege. They realized "how dear to our hearts are the scenes of our childhood," as they assembled in love and unity around that festive board laden with all good edibles like "mother used to make." Lucky indeed are they to have

Welch, West Virginia, is famous for other reasons than the fact that it is the center of one of America's richest coal fields. The school children of that city are attracting the attention of the dental profession nationally for the unique reason that the pupils of Welch school boast 100 per cent clean teeth from first graders up.

Notice the class of seven-year-olds shown above. For the benefit of a doubling camera man they are adding the finishing touch to their morning teeth wash.

Tooth brushes are part of the every-day equipment at the school, the same as a pencil box and pencils, a speller or a primary arithmetic. A dentist with a nurse assistant conducts daily drills. Needless to state, sore throat and other minor illnesses as a rule make little headway in Welch.

The healthy mouth crusade is sponsored by mining companies with large interests in that particular section of the coal state. It is a small feature of welfare work carried on in behalf of the youngsters of that community. The curriculum of the average modern school has been extended to include many more activities than a close application to the study of the three R's, but few have advanced to the stage where a tooth brush drill is a part of the day's schedule. The example at Welch might readily be followed by schools in larger cities, some dentists believe.

In a recent investigation of the educational advantages in the coal fields, made by the Bituminous Operators' Special Committee, working in co-operation with the United States Coal Commission, it was found that 93 per cent of company-owned mining communities have an eight or nine months' school term, and county superintendents are up to the hilt in the statement that teachers in these communities are superior to the majority of teachers in non-mining rural districts.

In 148 towns visited by trained investigators for the committee, the enrollment was 26,676 pupils, an average of 180 to a community. Free libraries were found in 18 per cent of the company owned towns.

brother and sister who always keep the home fires burning with a tender welcome for each when worldly cares are laid aside for a visit within those sacred walls. The day ended for too soon. As adieus were spoken, and each vended their separate ways it was with thankful hearts for this day, and the hope that the anticipated Christmas reunion may have no absent member.

Those present from Mexia were, Mr. Henry Roller, Mrs. Mollie Bessing, Mrs. Dora Phillips, Mrs. Jno. Griffith, Miss May Bessing.

EVERYONE who drives a Studebaker Special-Six marvels at the ease with which it steers.
